

Lori Tapahonso

Lori Tapahonso (Diné/Acoma Pueblo) is a creative, communications, and cultural consultant with extensive experience in public relations, journalism, theater, film, and higher education. Through her business, Indig●Image, she produces TV and film projects and provides culturally responsive consulting as an Indigenous professional in the filmed industry. Her professional experience in the entertainment industry is rooted at the intersection of equity, social justice and accurate representation. She most recently starred in a short film due out this spring and co-produced a children's TV puppet series called, "Navajo Highways." Lori holds a master's degree in Management and Leadership from Baker University; a bachelor's degree in Communication Studies from The University of Kansas; and an associate's degree in Theater Arts from Haskell Indian Nations University. And most importantly, Lori is a mother of two adult children, Chamisa Bah and Briana Nezbah; and is married to Dr. Jimmy Snyder (Kickapoo).